Social book marking submission has developed into a powerful tool for SEO experts. It involves linking sites within the various forums, blogs and message boards on social networking websites, blog sites and content centric sites like Digg. Considered a better alternative to submitting a website on blogs, manual social book marking is a simple, convenient and hassle-free way of making sure that your site is noticed and marketed in the right circle.

Google and other major search engines have decided to go content-centric; the more places you have your content, the more traffic you generate. Submitting your site manually with social book marking sites like Digg, blog this!, orkut, and myspace will ensure a heavier volume of relevant traffic. Our constant endeavour is to serve sites with well-researched and well-directed traffic by our book marking submission.

Our team ensures that every site is first indexed for the intended target audience, so only sites with a suitable page rank and pedigree are selected. All links are strictly one-way and permanent. Our service is tuned in to the ever-changing world of search engine optimisation. With the implementation of context-sensitive search algorithms and with the advent of more personalised search results for users, submission of your site contents to a social book marking site is a no longer a matter of trial and error.

Each book marking site has its own pros and cons, and it takes meticulous planning and research before one can consider submitting his/her site content to a social book marking service. From the most basic press release to more complex articles, all site content is examined and then the appropriate site is determined for submission. To top it all, since all book marking sites require registration, there is no way that any spam links can be generated to or from your site.

Social book marking sites are search engine friendly and within seven days of submission, links start to appear in all major search engines. If you are serious about your sites Link Building, Ranking and Traffic... Social Book marking is a must.
